Shufuti vs SharApu (Home Page)

Registration and Login in SharApu

Each Member can Register once in SharApu. Once the registration is done the user can change their role between Job Seeker and Hierer. The default login for SharApu will take the user to Job Seeker Profile. There by choosing "Switch Role" button the user can change their role.

Login for Hierer

In Shufuti Hierer Login is completely dependent on Registration. This is the main difference between Shufuti and SharApu.

The diagram illustrates the user flow for the Shufuti application. It begins at the Home Page, which provides access to various features via navigation bars and dispatches users to the Login page. The primary path for new users is through 'Registration as A Member'. This process involves choosing a method to register (Membership Registration, Google, or Japan ID). After successful registration, users are directed to a default login screen. From here, they can log in using social media (SNS), Google, Japan ID, or as a job seeker by providing their username/email and password. All successful login paths lead to the SharApu state, while failed attempts result in a 'Not IN SharApu' status.

Users Can Search for as many job as they want.

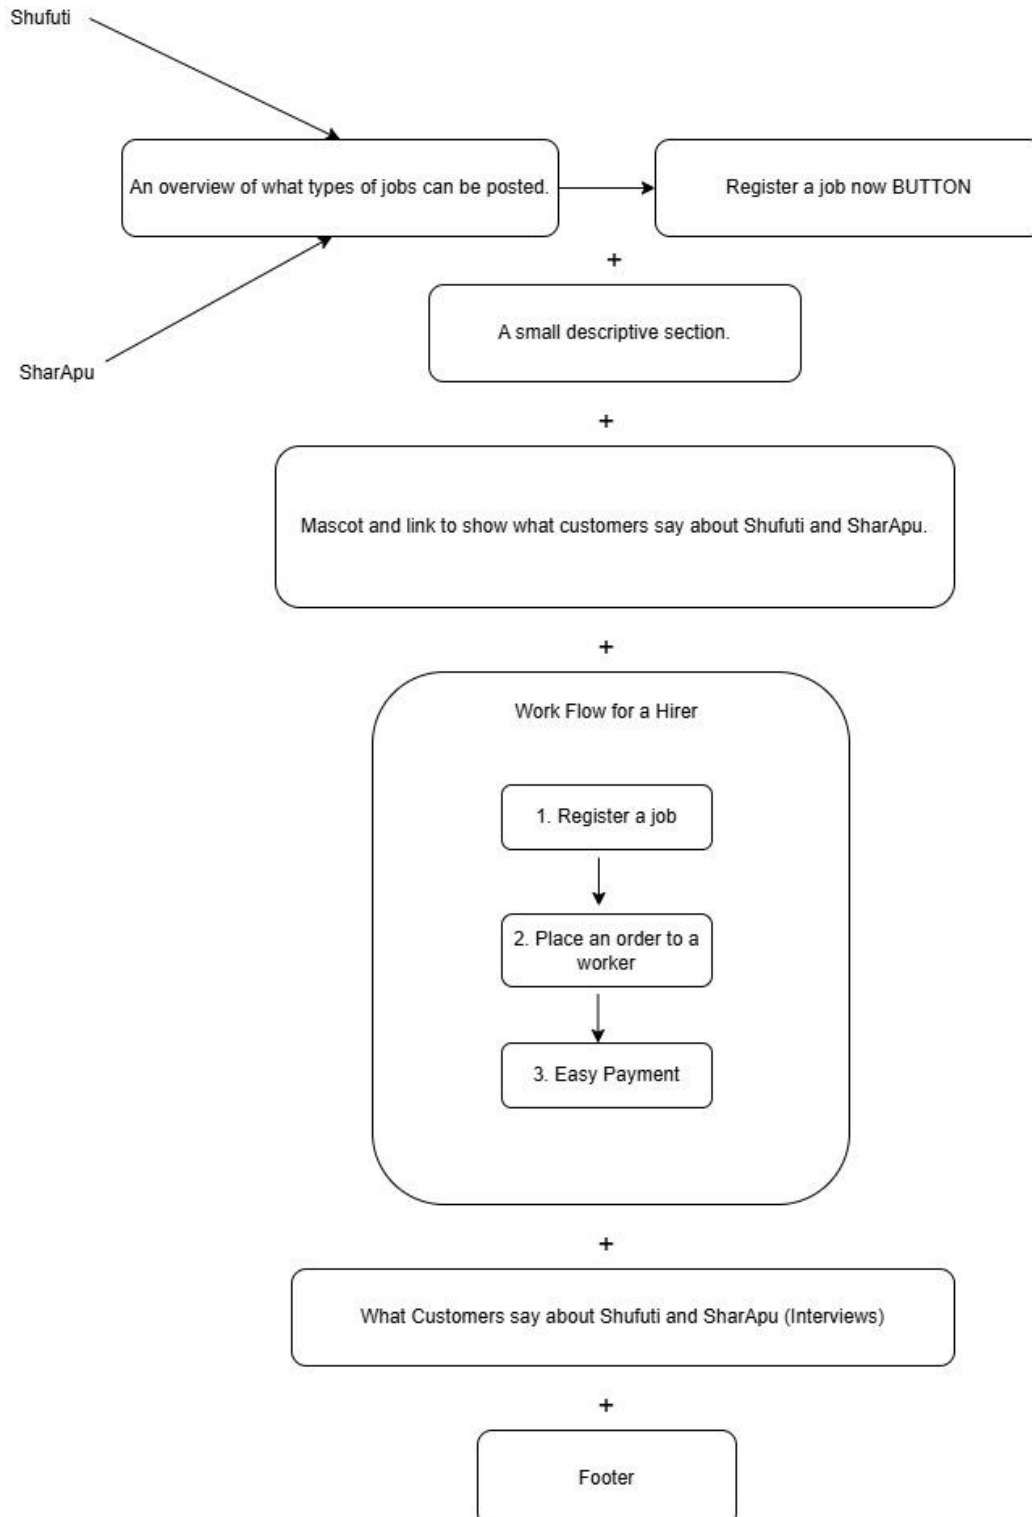

Those who want to receive work page

This page is aimed towards the job seeker community. It is basically a descriptive guide for the job seeker about how they can start finding their suitable jobs.

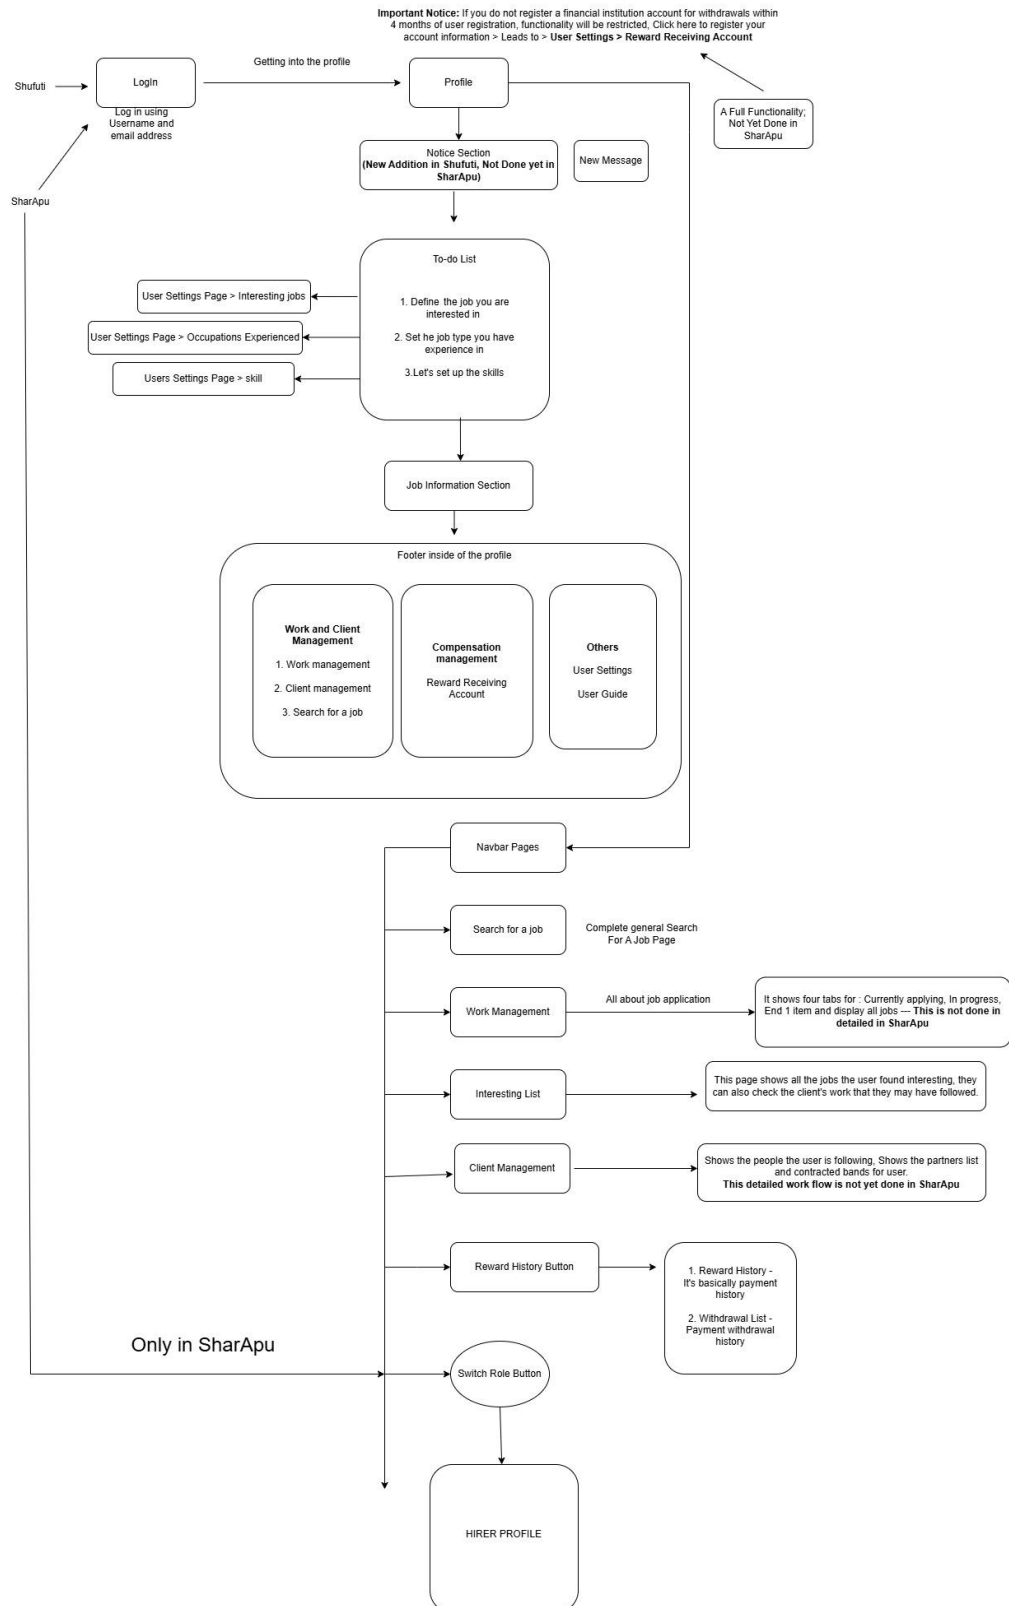

If You Want To Order Work Page

This page is aimed at the hirer searching for the perfect person to finish their project/task. It is like a guide page for understanding the system to find the right candidate.

Logging In

This is one of the key system comparisons between Shufuti and SharApu. In Shufuti, after logging into the system, the user is generally led to a job seeker profile. To get into the hirer profile, Shufuti needs to depend entirely on the registration system. However, in SharApu, this is much easier as a user only needs to register once.
